Canadian-Based Gang
Claims Responsibility for
Firing Outside Disha
Patani’s House

Mumbai (News Desk) – The gang of Goldy Brar, a Canada-based gangster, has claimed responsibility for the firing incident outside Bollywood actress Disha Patani’s house. According to police, the incident took place in Civil Lines, Bareilly, where multiple shots were fired outside the actress’s residence. Fortunately, no casualties were reported. The gang accepted responsibility through a social media post written in Hindi, claiming that the act was in response to the alleged disrespect of prominent religious figures by Disha Patani and her sister Khushboo Patani. The message stated that the firing was merely a “trailer” and warned that if anyone insulted their religion in the future, no one would be spared. Authorities confirmed that investigations are ongoing and the authenticity of the social media claim is being verified. Khushboo Patani described the incident as extremely distressing. Reports suggest that the controversy originated from statements made by Khushboo Patani about religious leader Anirudh Acharya’s views on women and live-in relationships, which were later twisted and circulated on social media, falsely alleging that she insulted Premanand Maharaj. Police have increased security around the actress’s residence, stating that the family’s safety is their top priority.
